

HT 271W ECOJUSTICE: THEOLOGY, ETHICS, PRACTICE

Instructors: Craig L. Nesson and Man Hei Yip

Elective; Open for all.

1 Credit; letter grade or credit/no credit

This course explores theological and ethical perspectives that inform the practice of ecojustice. Ecojustice is an emerging field within theology and ethics that engages and responds to the environmental crisis facing the Earth and all creatures, especially the emergency caused by climate change. The course will be in a seminar format centered on the reading and discussion of the required texts.

OBJECTIVES:

1. To explore theological and ethical foundations of ecojustice (practice of biblical and theological wisdom).
2. To claim one's own theological voice as a person committed to ecojustice (practice of pastoral concern).
3. To become more deeply formed for church leadership in relation to ecojustice (practice of complex analysis).
4. To examine the theological and ethical responsibilities facing the church in advocating for the integrity of creation (practice of personal faith and integrity).

PROCEDURE: The course meets once per week for one hour. The primary format is interactive discussion of readings led by the instructors and students.

EVALUATION: 1) Attendance and demonstrating informed preparation to discuss assigned readings. 2) Discussion leadership of assigned readings on a rotating schedule. 3) Project or research paper to demonstrate integration of semester's work.
